EXPLANATION OF COMPANY'S ACTION

L. C. Griffiths Tells Why Telephone Company Announced Rate Boost, Effective July 1.

SPEAKS AT PUBLIC MEETING

Recommendation of Citizens' Committee to Fight Case Before Commission is Approved.

That the Seymour Mutual Telephone Company decided to put higher rates into effect July 1, while its property was still under federal control so that the government wire administration would be held responsible for any loss of business or damage to property that might result from an advanced rental schedule, was the statement made by L. C. Griffiths, president of the company, at a public meeting held at the city building Tuesday night. He said that under a bill that has been passed by congress telephone properties that were taken over by the government will revert to the original owners on August 1, if the measure is signed by the President this month. It is understood that the President will affix his signature to the bill within the next few days.

The statement of Mr. Griffiths explaining why the company had made the new rate effective July 1 without giving notice to the public came as an answer to a question asked by Charles Leininger, a member of the citizens' committee. Mr. Leininger said that he thought that inasmuch as the rate controversy here was to be taken before the Indiana Public Service Commission, regardless of any local decision or agreement that might be reached, the company ought to have waited a few months and avoid an unnecessary discussion. Mr. Griffiths said that the management of the Seymour Telephone Company decided to put the higher rate schedule into effect while the property was still under federal control.

DISCRIMINATION IN FREIGHT RATES

Chamber of Commerce to Hold Meeting Friday Morning to Discuss The Matter.

ON ROAD BUILDING MATERIAL

State Chamber of Commerce Says It Costs Indiana $1,000 More Per Mile Than Illinois.

Clark B. Davis, secretary of the chamber of commerce, has called a meeting of that organization for 10 o'clock Friday morning at the city building, for the purpose of discussing a suggestion coming from the state chamber of commerce to the effect that freight rates on road building material are discriminatory against Indiana and in favor of Illinois. It is stated that the freight rates mean that it will cost Indiana $1,000 more per mile to build certain kinds of roads than in Illinois.

R. B. Boapfeich, of Indianapolis, and John E. Northway, of Columbus, will speak at this meeting. They will also take up the question of errors in shipping bills. The letter coming to Dr. Davis states that many mistakes are made in the freight bills to the loss of the shippers. Manufacturers and other shippers are asked to attend the meeting Friday morning.

The text of the letter received by Mr. Davis relative to the freight rate discrimination and other matters to be taken up at the Friday morning meeting follows:

"Road Building Material—A careful check of rates on road building material shows a discrimination against Indiana and in favor of Illinois."

Mayor Burkart stated that he had intended to bring this matter to the attention of the council at the regular meeting next week, but that a board of works meeting is to be held tonight and the special council session can conveniently be held before that meeting.

THREATEN QUARANTINE AGAINST INDIANA WHEAT

Many Acres of Infected Grain in Lafayette District to be Destroyed.

Indianapolis, July 9—State officials are making desperate efforts to prevent the United States department of agriculture from quarantining the state to prevent the shipment of wheat to other states, it was learned today. The action of the department is threatened because of the large amount of diseased wheat in the state. Governor Goodrich sent the state entomologist to Lafayette early today with orders to investigate the situation and to burn every acre of wheat containing the disease to which the government objects. The Governor said most of the diseased wheat is in the region northwest of Lafayette and about four hundred acres will be burned. The farmers losing the wheat will be paid by the state, if the Governor's plans are carried out. He expects to arrange for this at the special session of the legislature to be called soon.

COWS POISONED WITH NITRIC ACID

Three Fine Animals Owned by a Brownstown Farmer Die As a Result.

BROKE OPEN CRIB DOOR

Acid Eaten by Cattle Was Used As a Fertilizer For Tomato Plants.

Three head of fine Jersey milk cows owned by W. L. Eastin, a farmer residing about a mile south of Brownstown, are dead as a result of eating nitric acid Monday afternoon. Two other cows also ate the acid but a veterinarian arrived in time to save them.

The animals got hold of the acid by pushing open a door to the corn crib where it was kept in a bucket. Mr. Eastin who has several acres of tomatoes planted was using the acid on the plants as a fertilizer.

After eating the acid the five animals went into the pasture. Neighbors passing along the road by the pasture noticed one of the cows on the ground and went to the house and notified the owner. He was baffled to know what had killed the cow and went into the pasture to look after the other animals when he found two more of them dead and two seriously sick. A veterinarian was called from Brownstown and administered treatment and succeeded in saving two of the animals.

Mr. Eastin later found the crib door open where the nitric acid was kept which explained the cause of the animals deaths. The three animals killed were high grade Jersey cows and were valued at about $150 each.

HOSPITAL ATTENDANT IS KILLED BY NEGRO PATIENT

Thomas Edwards Breaks Skulls of Man and Woman at Indianapolis Institution.

The skulls of both of Edwards' victims were fractured. Pfister lived only half an hour and Mrs. Kelley was reported dying at noon. The iron bar with which Edwards delivered the blow is said by hospital authorities to have been carelessly left in the laundry. Edwards was committed from the Marion county jail in 1914. Following his dual attack today, he was cornered by patients and captured.

NEGLECT SOMEWHERE.

Due to the neglect or oversight of someone the streets and alleys in this city are in a deplorable condition. Trash has been permitted to accumulate in some of the alleys and sweepings from the streets remain along the curb lines for a much longer time than is necessary to have them removed. The accumulation of filth and trash in some alleys has collected for so long a time that such places are generally regarded as a common dumping ground.

The method of removing street sweepings has not been satisfactory for several years. The trash is piled along the curbs by the sweepers and it is the duty of another department of the city government to see that it is hauled away. Some of this trash is within throwing distance of the business district and remains on the streets so long that it becomes a menace to public health. Such a manifest defect in the present removal system can be and should be remedied without delay.

Residents claim that they have brought this matter to the attention of the authorities many times. In some instances the complaints have brought results. In others the complaints were apparently useless. So far as we know the question has not been taken up with the city board of health, which is the last resort and to which appeals are made when all other methods fail.

The condition of the streets and alleys is of interest to every citizen who wants to live in a clean, healthful city. If the city ordinances are violated the authorities have a method to enforce them. But the city also has a duty to perform and it can not consistently compel the residents to do what the city itself neglects or fails to do.

If the city automobile can develop sufficient power to plow through the accumulations in the alleys some of the city officials might forego a few hours of joy riding each day while the car is used for an inspection for the benefit of the taxpayers whose money bought it.

ty was still under government control and then take the ease up with the commission as all such matters would have to be acted upon by that body after the federal wire administration released control. During the course of his remarks he said that the stockholders of the company had contemplated the increase in the rates here for the last two or three years but had decided to wait until after the close of the war before asking for the advance. He declared at the meeting that the local company was one of the first if not the first company to file its application for increased rates.

The meeting Tuesday night was called by Mayor Burkart for the purpose of receiving the final report of the citizens committee appointed several weeks ago to take up the matter of higher rates with representatives of the telephone company. W. C. Young, chairman of the committee, reviewed briefly the conferences that had been held during the last week and then read a brief report which stated that the committee and representatives of the company had been unable to reach an agreement as to increased rates and recommended that the city council employ an expert accountant and engineer to protect the citizens' interest when the case is called before the Indiana Public Service Commission.

Mr. Young moved the adoption of the committee's report and after his motion was seconded Mayor Burkart, who presided at the meeting, called for remarks. John A. Ross, another member of the citizens committee, said that he felt that there were certain phases of the company's reports that should be presented before the committee. He briefly reviewed the organization of the Seymour Mutual Telephone Company and said that the original franchise provided for a dividend rate for the stockholders of eight per cent. with an eight per cent. depreciation fund. He referred to certain sections of the commission's report, which is based upon figures contained in the company's books, to support his contention that the company is not entitled to an increase. He referred to early reports of the original mutual company to show that the first cost of the plant was approximately $38,500. He said that this report was published by the directors of the company in 1910 and that four years later figures in the company's books showed that the appraisement was $99,000. He further pointed out that in the following year the valuation had jumped to $105,000, according to the company's figures.

Mr. Ross dwelt at some length on the fact that in the August, 1914, report, after the appraisement has jumped to $99,000, the company showed a "surplus" of $44,000, and that in the next year's report this was divided between items designated as "depreciation fund" of about $12,000 and "dividend certificates outstanding" at $30,000.

Mr. Ross said that the cost of installing the first 637 telephones at the time the plant was built was $58 each, while the average cost to the present company of installing the next 507 was $1150. He also said that he thought that a reasonable valuation of the plant would be about $50,000.

Mr. Griffiths spoke in detail relative to Mr. Ross' remarks. He said that the records of the original mutual company were well kept for about a year and then the system of bookkeeping became lax. He said that he had been told that some of the original stockholders received dividends and that others had not. A new system of bookkeeping was installed in 1912, he declared, but it was complicated and inadequate and that just before the present company took over control the books were kept in such a way that none of the entries were plain. He said he knew nothing about the books before the present company took control of the property. Since that time all the rules of the commission have been adhered to, he said.

Mr. Griffiths declared that when the company proposed to buy the local company stock it had an engineer to come here and make an appraisal of the property and that he fixed the value at $73,923. It was on this basis that the company purchased some stock as high as two for one.

Mr. Griffiths said that the item of "surplus" of $44,000 appearing in the financial statement after his company took over the property was merely a book item and had no value. If the valuation is reduced below the company's figures of $105,000, this item will be corresponding reduced, he said. He said that the net income, not including a reserve for depreciation and dividends had been reduced each year for several years and in 1919 would be only slightly in excess of $4,000. If recalled that the old rates were fixed by local people on the basis of the most economical operation possible of a mutual company and that if the rates then were just and equitable they are certainly too low now under conditions which T. M. Honan, a member of the committee, stated that he understood that the proposition was to adjust the matter here if possible in order to avoid any disturbance of business which would result if a hard fought telephone fight should be decided upon. When the management of the company refused to accept the committee's compromise plan which he thought was liberal, there is nothing else to do, he said, but to prepare to fight the case when it comes before the commission. He urged that the recommendation be approved.

As the matter now stands the patrons of the company will be required to pay the higher rates until the commission acts. However the proposition of the company to refund any difference if the commission's rates are lower than the ones now in effect, still stands.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) and Industry

The phases of usefulness the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) renders as a public servant are varied.

One of the services not generally known, which the Company must render, is to assist industrial institutions in keeping down their manufacturing costs.

The Company maintains a staff of highly trained lubricating engineers, whose business it is to go into industrial plants, make a careful and thorough study of their mechanical equipment, and determine what lubricants are best suited to each machine under the prevailing conditions.

Their constant effort is to keep down manufacturing costs by specifying the particular oils and greases that will enable the machinery to deliver a maximum of service at a minimum of cost.

The work of the lubricating engineers is a part of the comprehensive service the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) renders.

This is another phase of the usefulness of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) as a public servant, showing the constant effort being made by the Company to discharge its obligation in a complete and satisfactory manner.

Uniform Tires

Mean Long-Distance Millers

They Look Alike and Wear Alike

MILLER TIRES are built by men who are trained to a championship standard. Only by uniform workmanship, can tires ever be uniform in mileage like the Miller. To train men to our perfection takes much time. We cannot supply all dealers with Miller Tires.

So our policy is to concentrate, as a rule, on the dealer in each locality who will give Miller Tire users exceptional attention. That governed our choice in this city.

We chose a concern that knows that to give real service it must first of all carry a full stock of sizes, so that when you want a Miller Tire in a hurry, you can get it without waiting.

We are impressed especially with their ability to give motorists an expert repair service, and by their reasonable charges.

Before making this selection we canvassed the local field thoroughly. And the Miller agents here are making good with us by making good with you. Are you getting the benefit of what they have to offer?

U.S. FIELD TRIALS OF POISON GAS

Public Now Permitted to Know Details of the Tests Conducted.

ANIMAL LIVES SACRIFICED

Conditions Were Reproduced As Nearly Like Those of the Battlefield as Possible—Greatest Secrecy Maintained.

New York.—Tucked away in a barren pine belt in New Jersey, near Lakehurst, was located one of the most interesting army camps in the country, for there tests were made in actual large scale field trials of new gases which looked promising for warfare in laboratory tests. Of course the greatest possible secrecy guarded all proceedings there, the personnel, both enlisted and commissioned, having been selected with great care, so that nothing would leak out. Now that the camp is disbanded, scarcely a trace of it remaining, Lieutenant Colonel W. S. Bacon, chief of the proving division, tells of the work of the camp in the Journal of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry.

While the camp lasted all the things done with gas on the combat fields of Europe were tried out there. The camp had trenches, dugouts, concrete bomb-proof retreats, so that gas effects might be accurately noted and results applied to overseas work. There were hospitals for the gassed, goats, dogs, guinea pigs and monkeys that were subjected to military exposure, and the sort of care that humans received abroad was given to those animal sufferers. They were saved when possible, and when not possible the camp authorities knew they had a gas which would be fatal also to enemy soldiers. The camp called at all times for the exercise of chemical, electrical, medical, engineering and military skill of high order, and it became one of the most valuable agencies in the war.

Proper Bursting Charge.

"To make clear the trials and tests necessary," Lieutenant Colonel Bacon writes, "before a substance was finally recommended let us take as an example substance X, which has been found in the research laboratory to be promising, both as to toxicity and ease of manufacture. Enough of this substance was made to fill several hundred shells of various calibres. The first step toward making a recommendation was to determine a proper bursting charge for the substance."

"After the bursting charge had been determined large numbers of the shell were repeatedly fired on trenches, wooded areas, rolling and level ground, etc., in the same numbers as used in actual warfare."

"Animals were placed in these areas and samples of the gas taken. After a number of such experiments, very accurate and constant results were obtained, upon which, if the substance proved satisfactory, data could be given to the artillery as regards how many shells of this particular gas should be used, with corrections for size of area, wind velocities, temperatures, ground conditions, etc. Trials were continually held to determine how many high explosive shells could be fired with gas shell on the same area without affecting the concentrations."

"The use of the high explosive shell in combination with gas shell was highly important in order to disguise the gas bombardment. The burst of gas shell fired alone can be distinguished by the small detonation."

Lines of Trenches.

Two complete lines of trenches and several impact grounds were used for the work, and shells were fired for as great distance as 5,000 yards. Not only were the most minute accounts kept of all conditions at the point of firing, but a sampling contrivance was arranged by which at all times and places the intensity and effect of gas-charged air could be recorded. Photographs were also taken of every explosion as an aid in determining the conditions that would be most effective in practice, low-lying clouds of gas and wide diffusion being the things desired. From 125 to 150 samples of gassed air were taken daily on the ranges.

There was a research laboratory for the analysis of gases under field practice, a chemical laboratory to prepare gases for the experimental work, and a loading plant. The filling of every shell was analyzed and immediately after firing, samples of the released gas were at once analyzed for decomposition products.

Lightning Killed Horses.

Marshalltown, Iowa.—Orin Swift, a farmer living near Gilman, could not have planned better had he wanted his horses electrocuted than to have had them standing at their mangers, leaning their heads over an iron rod running the length of the mangers when a thunder storm came up. Lightning struck a corner of the building, followed a post downward and ran along the iron rod. Six of the horses fell dead in their tracks and another was injured so badly that it will have to be shot. The horses were worth $200 each and were insured for three-fourths of their value.

DID NOT KILL CAT

Instead of Death There Was a Birth of Kittens.

A Main street drug clerk was visited this week by a man and his wife, the latter much agitated over the errand. They asked for four ounces of chloroform with which to kill their cat. At least this was the husband's statement; the wife was too busy shedding tears to do more than cling sadly to his arm. They were given a bottle of anesthetic and departed, stopping en route home to purchase a new wash boiler at $2.65 in which to perform the last rites on the cat.

According to date later made public, puss was put to sleep on a pillow in the boiler, the bottle of liquid was emptied within and the cover slipped on. In the morning preparations were made for the burial. But when the boiler cover was lifted, lo! instead of one cat there were five kittens! The liquid was only spirits of niter, given by mistake by the drug clerk, and puss had become the mother of four likely kittens. It is rumored that a lease of life has been extended the family.

NEW POLES BEING INSTALLED BY PUBLIC SERVICE COMPANY

Preparing to Run High Tension Wire to Connect With Electric Light Plant.

A force of men is busy today installing some new electric wire poles for the Interstate Public Service Company along Second street. New and higher poles are being put in to take the place of old ones which are being removed and according to the foremen in charge of the force of men, it is the company's orders to reduce the number of poles along the street.

Some objection was raised by citizens who were opposed to the company placing more poles along the street but it is pointed out that only new ones are being installed to take the place of the old ones. Considering the franchise that the Interstate company has with the city Judge John M. Lewis, city attorney, gave the opinion that the company could not be prohibited from putting in new poles. By the new and higher poles the company will be able to put up the high tension wire on the poles used for the interurban line. It will be remembered that the company started the work of laying the high tension wire through the alley south of Second street which resulted in an injunction being filed by the telephone company preventing them from doing so.

FIGHTER LIVES 35 DAYS IN HOLE

British Private's Experience Considered Most Remarkable of War.

AIDS HIS HELPLESS COMRADE

Lives on Food Taken From Dead Bodies—Wanders Too Far Afield and Is Taken Prisoner by Germans.

London.—Private Peters of the British army lived five weeks with a helpless comrade in a hole within thirty yards of the German trenches.

Their experience is considered the most remarkable of the war. It was in 1917, at Croiselles that the fifty men then remaining of Private Peters' company were ordered to dig in. The spot was a sunken road. The men had passed their objective and run into their own barrage fire. They fell like ninepins.

When Private Peters looked up from his digging only his captain, himself and a comrade named McGuinness remained. Then the captain was shot dead and the comrade fatally wounded. Private Peters went out for a look around and found a stretcher bearer with a shattered thigh. He hauled him into the dugout. The stretcher bearer had iodine and his wound was kept free of infection.

Foiled German Officers.

"That night two German officers came along but we shammed dead and they passed on briskly, for the British stuff was coming over," says Peters, telling his story.

"Shrapnel lodged on top of our dugout; bits found their way inside. The German officers stood over us the next night. But they never searched our hiding place."

"There were sixty dead men lying about outside. Each night I went out and took away their iron rations and biscuits. The first few days we were short of water; then it rained every day for a while and I caught water in mackintosh sheets."

"I made a stove of a bully-beef tin, broken candles and a flannel rag, caught the rays of the sun with a periscope glass when it shone, and so lighted our stove."

Food of Dead Gives Out.

"The night came when the food of the dead soldiers outside had all been taken, and I went further afield, with a compass. I got lost and fell over a German telephone wire. I was captured and sent to Germany, where I was held until armistice day."

Taylor, after Peters' capture, was examined by the Germans, who lifted his sound leg, but he shammed dead and they passed on. Then he crawled through the German trenches, which were by that time thinly held, over the barbed wire, across No Man's Land and to the British lines. But his leg was so long unset that he will never walk right again.

SINGLE ADMISSION TO CHAUTAUQUA IS 50c

It is Apparent That Purchase of Season Ticket at $2 is The Most Economical.

There has been some comment as to the single admission charges at the Redpath Chautauqua this year. The Seymour Chautauqua Association has decided to make a charge of fifty cents for each attraction, both afternoon and evening. Under these conditions the securing of a season ticket at $2.00 is much cheaper even though one attends just the big attractions.

A treat of more than vital interest to the community will be the discussion of government ownership of railroads. This question will be discussed by two of the ablest men on the fourth night of the chautauqua.

Leslie M. Shaw, secretary of the Treasury under President Roosevelt, twice governor of Iowa, will uphold the negative of this question while Charles Zublin, writer and lecturer, member of University of Chicago faculty and a man strong democratic spirit will have the affirmative.

Lovers of musical numbers have not been forgotten and each day brings with it some musical attraction. Perhaps the strongest number will be the appearance of Mme. Lenska, prima donna contralto who will appear with the Great Lakes String Quartet. She is of Russian birth and came to this country in 1914 for a five month operatic engagement and was booked for a world tour afterwards, a tour which was postponed because of the world war.

Illinois that will average $1,000 per mile. We are trying to secure an adjustment of this and can succeed only with the co-operation of all parts of the state.

"Indiana-Illinois Rate Case—This case has now been set for hearing before the Interstate commerce commission July 21 in the federal building, Chicago.

"Auditing Freight Bills—Unquestionably there is a lot of money being lost to the business men of your town because of the lack of an audit system for freight bills. The state chamber of commerce has a complete set of files and expert help at your service. We would be very glad indeed to take such bills as your members may have and check them for them, and if no errors are found there will be no charge. If we do find errors, a reasonable commission will be charged for the collection of the overcharge or error.

"This is only one of the many services that the state chamber is offering its individual and organization members. We would appreciate it if you would talk to your leading shippers and see if they are in need of such service. If they care to send us a trial bundle of bills we will be glad to go over them."

Several Local Roadloaders Receive Extra Pay Checks—Accumulates Since Last January.

Along with the regular semi-monthly pay checks a number of Baltimore & Ohio railroad employees received an extra check today representing back pay due them since last January.

It will be recalled that employees in different branches of the railroad service were allowed an increase which became effective last January. However, the railroad company did not start paying the increase until April. The back pay checks distributed today represent the increase in wages for the months of January, February and March.

The Vigor of Swift & Company Continues Only Because of Service

The only "control" over the packing industry is the "control" that gathers about the ability to do a necessary job in the best way.

Swift & Company has reached a leading place in the industry because the size and character of the job of providing a nation's meat require the wide and thorough organization, the experience and devotion to duty, found in an institution like Swift & Company.

The moment Swift & Company ceases to perform its functions of usefulness with the greatest efficiency and satisfaction to the people, its position in the industry will vanish.

Swift & Company service is performed at a profit of a fraction of a cent per pound.

Let us send you a Swift "Dollar".

RED CROSS NURSE IS COMING HERE

Public Health Nursing and Home Hygiene Instruction Part of Peace Time Program.

SPEAKS AT CHAUTAUQUA.

"Nurse the Most Needed Woman in the World," Says Miss Jane A. Delano, Director of the Department of Nursing of the American Red Cross.

To place the public health on a higher plane than it has ever been is the object of a national program undertaken by the American Red Cross as part of its peace time plan. From coast to coast and from lakes to gulfs the Red Cross is spreading the gospel of good health and of the proper care of the sick by fostering the study and practice of nursing, both by organized public health activities and by members of the family in every home. Through the Chautauqua an official representative of the Red Cross Department of Nursing will soon tell the people of this community the story of what is being done and will ask their co-operation.

One of the great lessons of the world war is found in the unnecessarily low standards of physical health revealed. This was brought out most forcibly in the great number of rejections of young men called to the colors under the Selective Service Law. Records show that throughout the United States one-third of the young men examined for military service were disqualified from bearing arms for their country through minor physical defects, a large proportion of which might have been avoided by compulsory school examination and proper medical and nursing care.

Urgent Need of Nurses.

Further proof of the general urgent need of women trained in nursing was supplied by the epidemics of Spanish influenza that have caused terrific loss of life and suffering throughout the country. Hundreds of thousands of persons died, and in many communities the plague spread without any adequate means of checking it because of the impossibility of obtaining women capable of caring for the victims. Reports show that many persons actually died without attention because the overworked doctors could not reach them all, nurses could not be found who knew what to do, and neighbors feared to go near the helpless patients.

The uselessness and danger of such a waste of "human power" is only too apparent, for the health and strength of a nation can only be measured by the health and strength of its people. Recognizing the fact that the crux of the whole situation lies in giving every community the means of building up its own nursing strength, the American Red Cross, in co-operation with the various Chautauquas, is sending broadcast the message that none can afford to ignore.

Phases of Public Health Nursing.

Public health nursing includes many phases, such as bedside nursing, in which the nurse visits the patients and gives them hourly care as necessary; school nursing; care of expectant mothers, babies and small children; work in factories and industrial centers; rural nursing, and instruction in Red Cross courses, home hygiene, home dietetics, care of the sick, and various other forms of community service.

To all American women the Red Cross sends this message:

"If you are interested in nursing as a profession, enter one of the training schools for nurses, many of which offer scholarships, and specialize in public health work. If you are already a graduate nurse and anxious to enter this field, the Red Cross has scholarships and loan funds which will equip you for this work. Wives and mothers are urged to take the Red Cross Course of Instruction in Home, Hygiene and Care of the Sick so that they will be able to maintain to the highest degree the health and to nurse members of their household in time of minor illnesses."

Throughout the length and breadth of the land the American Red Cross, spreading the gospel of good health, is sounding a call to American women to adopt the study of nursing, either to join a profession which is daily becoming more highly valued or to fit themselves for nursing in the home.

The Red Cross lecturer soon to appear here will help her hearers visualize the remarkable history of nursing service at home and abroad and will expound the ideals of health conservation so often neglected in many communities. Supplementing the sentimental side of nursing, the mother touch, the lecturer will give a demonstration of efficiency in the sick room. Modern methods of sanitation and scientific handling of the individual sick and of epidemics will also be outlined to her audience.

NURSES FOLLOWED THE ARMY.

"For four years," declares Miss Jane A. Delano, Director of the Department of Nursing of the American Red Cross, "wherever the armies of Europe and America have gone the Red Cross nurses followed. Now that peace has come, she is still the most needed woman in the world, for it is her privilege to lead in a great nation-wide crusade against the ignorance and neglect which allows epidemics and disease to drain the vitality and the life of our citizens."

MUCH LIKE LIFE'S PATHWAY

Effective Parable in Edward Everett Hale's Description of Doings of a Picnic Party.

You all go out to a picnic, and meet together in some pleasant place in the woods, and you put down the baskets there, and leave the path with the ice in the handiest place you can find, and cover it with the blanket. Then you all set out in the great forest. But it is only a few of the party who choose to start hand in hand along a gravel path which leads straight to the well, and probably those few enjoy less and gain less from the day's excursion than any of the rest. The rest break up into indifferent knots, and go some here, some there, as their occasion and their genius call them. Some go after flowers, some after berries, some after butterflies; some knock the rocks to pieces; some climb up to where there is a fine view, some sit down and copy the stumps, some go into the water, some make a fire, some find a camp of Indians and learn to make baskets. These all come back to the picnic camp in good order each eager to tell what he has seen and heard, each having satisfied his taste and genius and each all having made vastly more of their day than if they had held to the gravel path and walked in column to the well and back again.—Edward Everett Hale.

The Greeks.

It is impossible to contemplate the annals of Greek literature and art without being struck with them, as by far the most extraordinary and brilliant phenomena in the history of the human mind. The very language, even in its primitive simplicity, as it came down from the rhapsodists who celebrated the exploits of Hercules and Theseus, was as great a wonder as any it records. All the other tongues that civilized man has spoken are poor and feeble, and barbarous, in comparison with it. Its compass and flexibility, its riches and its powers are altogether unlimited. It not only expresses with precision all that is thought or known at any given period, but it enlarges itself naturally, with the progress of science, and affords, as if without an effort, a new phrase, or a systematic nomenclature whenever it is called for.—Thomas Keightley.

Being the Authentic Narrative of a Treasure Discovered in the Bahama Islands in the Year 1903—Now First Given to the Public.

BY RICHARD LEGALLIENNE

Copyright by Doubleday, Page & Company CHAPTER IV.

In Which We Enter the Wilderness.

Andros, as no other of the islands, is surrounded by a ring of reefs stretching all around its coasts. We were inside the breakwater of the reefs and the rolling swell of ocean gave way at once to a millpond calmness. We were at the entrance of North bight, one of the three bights which, dotted with numerous low-lying cays, breaks up Andros island in the middle and allows a passage through a maze-like archipelago direct to the northwest end of Cuba. Here on the northwest shore is a small and very lonely settlement—one of the two or three settlements on the else-deserted island—Behring's point.

Here we dropped anchor and Charlie, who had some business ashore, proposed our landing with him; but here again our passenger aroused his suspicions—though Heaven knows why—by preferring to remain aboard.

"Please let me off," he requested in his most top-of-the-English accent. "You can see for yourself that there's nothing of interest—nothing but a beastly lot of nigger cabins, and dirty coral rock that will cut your boots to pieces. I'd much rather smoke and wait for you in peace," and, taking out his case and lighting a cigarette, he waved it gaily to us as we rowed off.

He had certainly been right about Behring's point—Charlie was absurdly certain that he had known it before, and had some reason for not landing—for a more forlorn and poverty-stricken foothold of humanity could hardly be conceived; a poor little cluster of negro cabins, indeed, scrambling up from the beach, and with no streets but crazy pathways in and out among the gray clinker-like coral.

But it was touching to find even here that, though the whole worldly goods of the community would scarcely have fetched ten dollars, the souls of men were still held worth caring for; for presently we came upon a pretty little church, with a schoolhouse near by, while from the roof of an adjacent building we were hailed by a pleasant-faced white man, busy with some shingling.

It was the good priest of the little place, Father Serapion, disguised in overalls and the honest grime of his labor; like a true Benedictine, praying with his strong and skillful hands.

Father Serapion and Charlie were old friends, and Charlie took occasion to confide in him with regard to Tobias, and, to his huge delight, discovered that a man answering very closely to his description had dropped in there with a large sponger two days before. He had only stopped long enough to buy rum at the little store near the landing and had been off again through the bight, sailing west.

Father Serapion, who knew Charlie Webster's shooting ground, promised to send a swift messenger should anything further of interest to us come to his knowledge within the next week or so.

Then we sailed away from Behring's point, due west through the North bight. Morning found us sailing through a maze of low-lying desert islands of a bewildering sameness of shape and size, with practically nothing to distinguish one from another.

We had hoped to reach our camp, out on the other side of the island, that evening, but that dodging the shoals and sticking in the mud had considerably delayed us. Besides, though Charlie and the captain both hated to admit it, we had lost our way. So night began to fall and, as there is no sailing in such waters at night, we once more cast anchor under a gloomy, black shape of land, exceedingly lonesome and forgotten-looking, which we agreed to call "Little Wood cay"—till morning.

Soon all were asleep except Sailor and me. I lay awake for a long time watching the square yard of stars that shone down through the hatch in our cabin ceiling like a little window looking into eternity, while the waters lapped and lapped outside, and the night talked strangely to itself. Next morning Charlie and the captain were forced to own up that the island, discovered to the day, was not Little Wood cay. No humiliation goes deeper with a sailing man than having to ask his way. Besides, who was there to ask in that solitude? Doubtless a cormorant flying overhead knew it, but no one thought to ask him.

However, we were in luck, for, after sailing about a bit, we came upon two lonely negroes standing up in their boats and thrusting long poles into the water. They were sponging—most melancholy of occupations—and they looked forlorn enough in the still dawn. But they had a smile for our plight. It was evidently a good joke to have mistaken Sapodilla cay for Little Wood cay. Of course we should have gone—"so." And "so" we presently went, not without rewarding them for their information with two generous drinks of old Jamaica rum.

One of our reasons for seeking Little Wood cay, which it proved had been close all the time, was that it is one of the few cays where one can get fresh water. "Good water here," says the chart. We wanted to refill some of our jars, and so we landed there, glad to stretch our legs, while old Tom cooked our breakfast on the beach, under a sapodilla tree.

Now that we knew where we were, it was clear, but by no means careless sailing to our camp. We were making for what is known as the Wide Opening, a sort of estuary into which a listless stream or two crawl through mangrove bushes from the interior swamps.

Here, a short distance from the bank, on some slightly ascending rocky ground, under the spreading shade of something like a stretch of woodland, Charlie, several years ago, had built a rough log shanty for his camp—one of two or three camps he had thus scattered for himself up and down the "out islands," where nearly all the land is no man's, and so every man's land. The particular camp at which we now arrived he had not visited for a long time.

Here Tom brought us our dinner and the dark began to settle down upon us, thrillingly lonely, and full of strange, desolate cries of night creatures from the mangrove swamps that surrounded our little oasis for miles. Sailor lay at our feet, dreaming of tomorrow's duck. His master's thoughts were evidently in the same direction.

"How are you with a gun?" he asked, turning to the boy.

"Oh, I won't brag. I had better wait till tomorrow. But, of course, you will have to lend me a gun."

"I have a beauty for you—just your weight," replied Charlie, his face beaming as it did only at the thought of his guns, which he kept polished like jewels and guarded as jealously as a violinist his violin, or an Arab his harem.

Dawn was just breaking as I felt Charlie's great paw on my shoulder next morning. He was very serious. For a moment, as I sat up, still half asleep, I thought he had news of Tobias. But it was only duck.

I was scarcely dressed when Tom arrived with breakfast, and in a few minutes we had shouldered our guns and were crossing the half mile of peaty waste that divided us from the marl lakes. Ahead of us, the crew were carrying the skiffs on their shoulders, and very soon we were each seated in regulation fashion on a canvas chair in front of our respective skiffs, with our guns across our knees and a negro behind us to do the poling.

Charlie went ahead, with Sailor standing in the bow quivering with excitement. The necessity of absolute silence, of course, had been impressed upon us all by the most severe of all sportsmen. Tom (who was poling me) and I understood that our job, and also that of my companion, was to steal behind one mangrove copse after another till we had got on the other side of a quacking flock of teal—which might then be expected to take flight in Charlie's direction and rush by him in a terrified whirlwind. This not very easy feat of stalking we were able to accomplish, thereby winning Charlie's immense approval and putting him in a splendid temper for the rest of the day; for, as the wild cloud swept over him, he was able to bring down no less than seven. Like a true sportsman, in telling the story afterward in John Saunders' snugery, he averred that the number was nine!

The days that now followed for a week might be said to be accurate copies of that first day. But they were none the less delightful for that—for there is a sameness that is far indeed from monotony—though I will confess that, for my own tastes, toward the week-end the carnage of duck began to partake a little of that latter quality. Still, Charlie and Sailor were so happy that I wouldn't have let them suspect that for the world.

Besides, I had my wonderful young friend, to whom I grew daily more attached. I found myself feeling drawn to him as I can imagine a young father is drawn to a young son! and sometimes I seemed to see in his eyes the suggestion of a confidence he was on the edge of making me—a whimsical, pondering expression, as though wondering whether he dare to tell me or not.

"What is it, Jack?" I asked him for once when, early in our acquaintance, we had asked him what we were to call him, he had answered with a laugh: "Oh, call me Jack—Jack Harkaway. That is my name when I go on adventures. Tell me your adventure names. I don't want your prosaic every-day names." "Well," I had replied, entering into the lad's humor, "my friend here is Sir Francis Drake, and I, well—I'm Sir Henry Morgan."

"What is it, Jack?" I repeated.

But he shook his head.

"No!" he replied, "I like you ever so much—and I wish I could; but I mustn't."

"Somebody else's secret again?" I ventured.

"Yes!" And he added: "This time it's mine, too. But—some day perhaps; who knows?" He broke off in boyish confusion.

"All right, dear Jack," I said, patting his shoulder, "take your own time. We're friends anyway."

"That we are," responded the lad, with a fine glow.

I mustn't be too hard on Charlie, for Charlie had another object in his trip besides duck. As a certain poet brutally puts it, he had anticipated also "the hunting of man." In addition, though it is against the law of those Britannic islands, he had promised me a flamingo or two for decorative purposes. However, flamingoes and Tobias alike kept out of gunshot and, as the week grew toward its end, Charlie began to grow a little restive.

"It looks," he murmured one evening, as we had completed our fourteenth meal of roast duck, and were musing over our after-duck cigars, "it looks as if I am not going to have any use for this."

He had taken a paper from his pocket. It was a warrant with which he had provided himself, empowering him to arrest the said Henry P. Tobias, or the person passing under that name, on two counts: First, that of seditious practices, with intent to spread treason among his majesty's subjects, and, second that of willful murder on the high seas.

Charlie put the warrant back into his pocket and gazed disgustedly across the creek, where the loveliest of young moons was rising behind a frieze of the homeless, barbaric brush.

"There was never such a place in the world," he asserted, "to hide in—or get lost in—or to starve in. I have often thought that it would make the most effective prison in the world."

The young moon rose and rose, while Charlie sat in the dusk of our shanty, like a meditative mountain, saying nothing, the glowing end of his cigar occasionally hinting at the circumference of his face.

"I'll get him, all the same," he said presently, coming out of a sort of trance, in which, as I understood later, his mind had been making a geographical survey of our neighborhood, going up and down every creek and corner on a radius of fifty miles.

So we sought our respective cots; but I had scarcely begun to undress when a foolish accident for which I was responsible happened, an accident that might have had serious consequences, and which, as a matter of fact did have—though not at the moment.

Neglecting everything a man should do to his gun when he is finished with it for the day, I had left two cartridges in it, left the trigger on the hair-brink of eternity, and other enormities for which Charlie presently, and quite rightly, abashed me with profanity; in short, my big toe tripped over the beast as it stood carelessly against the wall of my cabin, and, as it fell, I received the contents in the fleshy part of my shoulder.

The explosion brought the whole crew out of their shanty, in a state of gesticulating nature and, as Charlie, growling like a bear, was helping to bring first aid, suddenly our young friend Jack—whose romantic youth preferred sleeping outside in a hammock slung between two palm trees—put him aside.

"I know better how to do this than you, Sir Francis," he said, laughing. "Let's have a look at your medicine chest, and give me the hint quick."

So Jack took charge and acted with such confidence and skill—finally binding up my wound, which was but a slight one—that Charlie stood by dumbfounded and with a curious soft look in his face which I didn't understand till later.

Then Jack looked up for a moment and caught Charlie's wondering look; and it seemed to me that he changed color and looked frightened.

"Sir Francis is jealous," he said; "but I've finished now. I guess you'll sleep all right after that dose I gave you. Good night. . . ." And he slipped away.

Jack had proved himself a practiced surgeon and, as he predicted, I slept well—so well and so far into next morning that Charlie at last had to waken me.

"What do you think?" were his first words.

"Why, what?" I asked, sitting up and wincing from my wounded shoulder.

"Our young friend has skipped in the night! Gone off on that little nigger sloop that dropped in here yesterday afternoon, I guess."

"You don't mean it?"

"No doubt of it—I wonder whether you've had the same thought as I had. You know I always said there was a mystery about that boy? Did you notice the way he bound your shoulder last night?"

"What of it?"

"Did you ever see a man bind a wound like that?"

"What do you mean?"

"I mean simply that the mystery about our Jack Harkaway was just this: Jack Harkaway was no boy at all—but just a girl; a brick of a dare-devil girl!"

You Can't Cure Rheumatism With Liniments and Lotions

If you are afflicted with Rheumatism, why waste time with liniments, lotions and other local applications that never did cure Rheumatism, and never will?

Do not try to rub the pain away, for you will never succeed. Try the sensible plan of finding the cause of the pain. Remove the cause, and there can be no pain. You will never be rid of Rheumatism until you cleanse your blood of the germs that cause the disease. S. S. S. has no equal as a blood purifier, scores of sufferers say that it has cleansed their blood of Rheumatism, and removed all trace of the disease from their system.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. at your drug store and get on the right treatment to-day. If you want special medical advice, address Medical Director, 49 Swift Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga.

MISS FLORENCE C. BULLARD.

Miss Florence C. Bullard, an American Red Cross nurse, who has just returned from three years' service with the French overseas, will speak at the Redpath Chautauqua regarding her war experiences. Miss Bullard went overseas in 1916 with the American Ambulance at Neuilly, France. This hospital was then one of the most complete in France and treated especially "plastic" cases, such as making new faces for mutes. Here Miss Bullard served for over ten months, caring for 1,000 wounded poilus every day. She was transferred in February, 1918, to Vauxhall to care for the American wounded and during the spring drive was sent to Soissons. "Two and one-half miles away in the woods," stated Miss Bullard, "the guns and aeroplanes of the Huns pounded away at the French trenches. The order came to retreat with our 1,500 wounded on a sanitary train as fast as we could. With our equipment piled around us in the mud and debris, we finally got our wounded on board and fell back to the rear, with the shrapnel breaking the isinglass out of the windows of our coaches." Miss Bullard was decorated by General Lasnet of the French Army with the Croix de Guerre and citation for "bravery under fire in caring for the wounded at Soissons. Villiers-Corretet and Chateau Thierry."
